University Presses eBook Collection

University presses are very important in the world of scholarly non-fiction publishing. They are of value to the scholarly establishment of researchers, teachers, librarians, and, ultimately, to the broader world of readers and to society itself. Most university presses are academic, non-profit publishing houses that are typically affiliated with large universities. Together they publish over 10,000 books a year, an impressive cultural body of work.

One major problem that university presses face is pricing. To make a book profitable they have to list their books at high prices, much higher than the commercial presses. Perhaps the most important recent development for university presses is the ease and relatively modest cost with which new titles and editions can be created as eBooks. University presses have begun capitalizing on eBooks, encouraging authors to continue with their research and to update their books in electronic format.

Using University Presses eBook collection

Searching for eBooks is quick and easy thanks to the advanced and user friendly platform developed by iG Publishing Group. Users can search across all titles in the collection simultaneously, or search across individual titles using keywords or phrases. Searches can be narrowed to content, titles, chapters and authors as well as browsing of book covers.

With the University Presses eBook

- Search across hundreds of key texts simultaneously.
- Narrow searches by title, chapter and author.
- Translate text into seven languages: simplified Chinese, traditional Chinese, Japanese, Korean, Arabic, Spanish and Portuguese.
- Create and store complex search strings using Search History and save them to disk for future reference.
- Bookmark specific pages or chapters for reference during a current session.
- Share information from specific eBooks with colleagues or students using networking sites such as Facebook, MySpace, Twitter, Google and many more.
- iSearch - Federated search engine will be offered to anyone who purchases two or more eBook collections.
- MARC records are provided.

About Our Partners

Each publisher collection is updated with new titles when they become available; and new publisher collections are added each month. University presses tend to develop specialized areas of expertise. Please find below, brief summaries on the various publishers that are available in our University Presses eBook Collection:

Amsterdam University Press (AUP) was established in 1992 by the University of Amsterdam. Within a few years AUP has built up a publishing list of more than 1,400 titles. The scholarly and trade publications of AUP are available in Dutch or English and relate to subjects in the humanities (language and literature, history, film studies, art) and social sciences.

Established in 1893, Columbia University Press currently publishes approximately 160 new titles every year in Asian studies and literature, biological sciences, business, culinary history, current affairs, economics, environmental sciences, film and media studies, finance, history, international affairs, literary studies, Middle Eastern studies, New York City history, philosophy, neuroscience, paleontology, political theory, religion, and social work.

Edinburgh University Press is the premier scholarly publisher in Scotland of academic books and journals and one of the leading university presses in the UK. Founded over fifty years ago, Edinburgh University Press became a wholly owned subsidiary of the University of Edinburgh in 1992.

Established in 1899, Liverpool University Press (LUP) is a successful independent publisher of academic books and journals in the humanities and social sciences. LUP publishes academic books and journals of high quality on a wide range of subjects including history, literature, art and architecture, by authors from around the world.

Established in 1905, the main focus areas of Princeton University Press are American history, applied science and engineering, archeology and ancient history, art and architecture, Asian and Asian American studies, astronomy and cosmology, biochemistry, finance, Jewish studies, Latin American studies, law, literature, mathematics and Middle Eastern studies.

The University of California Press, one of the most distinguished university presses in the United States, enriches lives around the world by advancing scholarship in the humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences. Its activities are supported by the UC Press Foundation and by philanthropic contributions from individuals and institutions.

The University of Chicago Press is the largest and one of the oldest of the American university presses. The Press was founded in 1892 as a division of the then newly-established University of Chicago. It has over 4,000 titles in print with 250 to 300 new titles added each year.

The University of Hawai'i Press is recognized as a leading publisher of books and journals on Asia, Asian Americans, Hawai'i and the Pacific. Disciplines covered include the arts, history, language, literature, natural science, philosophy, religion and the social sciences.

The University of Michigan Press publishes materials in a wide range of humanities and social science disciplines and produces educational texts for student audiences, with special emphasis on English language teaching. The press also publishes research that advances public understanding of the many vexed political, social, and cultural issues faced by a global, multicultural society; and produces regional books that contribute to fiction and the arts, human history, natural history and the changing environment of Michigan and the Great Lakes.

Future Releases from our Partners

The Press was founded in 1904, primarily as an outlet to publish academic research being carried out within the Victoria University of Manchester. Manchester University Press is the third largest University Press in the U.K and publishes textbooks for use by academics teaching in higher education, students and the interested general reader.

TEXAS A&M UNIVERSITY PRESS CONSORTIUM

Founded in 1974, Texas A&M University Press is the principal publishing arm of one of America's leading research institutions. Through the A&M Press Consortium, the Press markets and distributes additional titles published by seven other institutions in this region, including TCU Press, SMU Press, the University of North Texas Press, Texas Review Press at Sam Houston State University, State House/McWhiney Foundation Press at McMurry University, Winedale Publishing, and the Texas State Historical Association.

UBC Press

The University of British Columbia (UBC) Press is Canada's leading social sciences publisher. With an international reputation for publishing high quality works of original scholarship, its books draw on and reflect cutting-edge research pushing the boundaries of academic discourse in innovative directions. Each year UBC Press publishes seventy new titles in a number of fields, including Aboriginal studies, Asian studies, Canadian history, environmental studies, gender and women's studies, geography, health and food studies, law, media and communications, military and security studies, planning and urban studies, and political science.
